Advance to 8-Yard Line in 3d Period—Middies Show Superiority on Attack and Defense.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 27.—Pennsylvania's dreams of an untarnished record vanished into thin air on Franklin Field here this afternoon.

While 70,000 spectators, among them nearly 2,000 midshipmen, looked on, Navy celebrated Navy Day in a fitting manner by defeating the Red and Blue eleven, 6 to 0.

A perfectly executed forward pass from Midshipman Gannon to Midshipman Moret was the medium by which the future Admirals atoned for their previous misdeeds.

Along toward the end of the second period, after Clifton, Navy's big full-back from Paducah, Ky., had intercepted one of Pennsylvania's passes, Gannon dropped back ten yards to the enemy's 45-yard line and heaved a perfect toss to Moret, who ran fifteen yards to the Red and Blue goal line for the only score of the game.

Although Gannon's attempted drop kick for the extra point was blocked it made no material difference, for Penn's far-famed hidden ball attack failed miserably throughout the game and only for a few moments did Lou Young's eleven threaten.

That was at the end of the third period, when a fifteen-yard penalty against the Middies forced Bowstrom, who did Navy's punting, to kick from behind his own goal line.

Penn Threatens to Score.

Shober ran the punt back eight yards to Navy's 26-yard line and then, for a few moments, the Penn deception had Navy guessing. The Red and Blue worked the ball down inside the Middies' 20-yard line when the period ended, but Navy eventually took the ball on downs on its own 8-yard line to avert what looked like a possible Penn touchdown and either a tie score or a Penn victory by a one-point margin.

That was the only time during the whole sixty minutes of play that Penn held the upper hand. In the remainder of the time the Quakers were badly outplayed by Navy, which showed great improvement over the form it displayed two weeks ago against Notre Dame.

The Navy line, especially the ends, Moret, Morton and Byng, completely outplayed the Penn forwards, and there was far more dash in the Navy back field than there was in Pennsylvania's. Gannon, in particular, showed up well and by virtue of his successful pass, which won the game, was the outstanding hero of the occasion.

He, however, received great help from Bowstrom, Navy's gigantic tackle, who not only held his own punting against Scull, the Penn captain, but distinguished himself in other ways, particularly in the final period when he broke through to tackle Shober for a loss and on the very next play blocked Scull's kick, enabling Castree to recover on Penn's 38-yard line.

Penn's Playing Disappoints.

The Red and Blue was a big disappointment to its adherents. Following its victory over Penn State a week ago, Penn was hopeful of an undefeated record this season, but today's setback, coming as it did at the hands of a team that has already met with three reverses, was a staggering one.

Not only was the Penn forward wall outplayed by Navy's hard-charging line, but the back field play of the Red and Blue lacked deception and was unable to make any sustained progress. The hidden ball offense, on which Coach Young relied so much, was easily solved by the Middies, who crashed through and broke up Penn's formations before they got started, and the Red and Blue passing attack was easily solved by Navy's secondary defense.

Penn attempted innumerable forwards, but completed less than a third of those tried, and none for any substantial gains.

After Scull's punt at the opening of the second period Olexy, Penn's left end, brought onlookers to their feet by picking up a fumbled ball and dashing 35 yards to Navy's goal, but the play was called back and Penn was penalized 25 yards for clipping.
