

COLLEGE BASEBALL CURTAILED BY RAIN

Columbia-Fordham, Upsala- City College Among Many Games Off in East

N. Y. U. WILL PLAY TODAY

Violets to Oppose L. I. U. Nine —Lions to Meet Manhattan in Baker Field Contest

Rain necessitated the postponement of a large portion of yesterday's scheduled college baseball games throughout the East, including the intracity test between Columbia and Fordham on the Rams' field and City College's meeting with Upsala at Lewisohn Stadium. No new dates were announced for either of the local games.

Other contests washed out temporarily or permanently included St. Peter's at Panzer, Savage at Pace, Gettysburg at Navy, Penn at Lafayette, Temple at Villanova, Haverford at P. M. C., Delaware at West Chester Teachers and Lehigh at Muhlenberg.

Kashata Slated to Pitch

Two intracity games are on today's schedule for the metropolitan area. At Ohio Field, N. Y. U. and L. I. U., both strong contenders for the mythical city title, will come together, with John Kashata slated to take the mound for the Violets against Phil Caruso, brilliant sophomore southpaw of the Blackbirds.

L. I. U. defeated St. John's in its only start against a local rival thus far this season, while N. Y. U.'s lone setback in five intracity engagements came at the hands of the Redmen on Tuesday.

Columbia will play host to Manhattan at Baker Field in today's other local battle. This game originally was scheduled for a week ago yesterday, but rain prevented the meeting between the charges of Andy Coakley and his old pupil, Johnny Balquist, on that date.

Manhattan, which has yet to win a game this season, will gun for its first victory with Tom Coughlin, while Columbia is expected to call upon Hector Dowd. Incidentally, the Jaspers lost by 13-6, and not 13-2, as was reported from Philadelphia, in their game with Villanova on Tuesday.

Start Series Saturday

The race for metropolitan supremacy will really begin to take shape on Saturday, with three intracity games scheduled. The first game of the annual home-and-home series between N. Y. U. and Fordham at Ohio Field is on the program, while L. I. U. will visit Manhattan and C. C. N. Y. will entertain St. John's.

In the American University-Georgetown game in Washington on Tuesday, Georgetown was the winner, 14-3. Through an error by a news service, American University was reported as the winner by that score.