HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 9— Finding themselves in a 3-3 half-time stalemate with a stubborn Pennsylvania football team, two Dartmouth quarterbacks took matters into their own legs today by running for two touchdowns and a 19-3 victory before 17,600 spectators at Memorial Field.

Just when it seemed that the Quakers had solved the Big Green's defense driving 85 yards to the tying field goal, by Stan Startzell, Dartmouth came out of its dressing room at the beginning of the third period and put a stop to it. Led by the senior quarterback, Bill Pollock, the Ivy League's defending champions found huge success in a man-in-motion series that featured pitchouts, power sweeps around both ends and reverse traps through the middle.

But the key was Pollock himself. He ran for 12 yards, 11 yards and finally 7 yards for the touchdown, all on fake handoffs followed by large holes opening up at the guards plus splendid blocking downfield.

When Penn was halted twice more, Dartmouth's junior quarterback, Steve Stetson, entered the fray and dashed 57 yards on an identical keeper play up the middle.

At the time of Stetson's appearance the score was just 10-3, and Penn appeared very much on the verge of putting a dent in the Green's opening Ivy game, especially with Tom Pinto missing by inches on some very long touchdown-minded passes.

Pollock and his prime running backs, Rick Klupchak and Brendan O'Neill, had started to rip off good chunks of yardage, and the momentum had switched to the Big Green. So the arrival of Stetson, noted for his passing, was something of a surprise, but the Laconia, N.H., product quickly justified the move with the longest run of the day, icing the game.

For Jake Crouthamel, Dartmouth's new coach, it was the third game in a row against an undefeated team (Penn was 2-0), and it was the third game in a row against a new coach (Harry Gamble). Jake is undefeated himself (3-0).

This version of the usually strong Dartmouth eleven seems to be a slow starter. Just as Holy Cross last week did its best gaining and led 9-7 early in the game, so did Pinto catch the Green defensive backs asleep by completing a 30-yard pass to Rich Mellor on the second play.

But Pinto could find no other lapses in Dartmouth on that drive, so Steve Bauman was sent in to try a 46-yard field goal.

Weymouth Crowell, however, blocked it, the first of a number of misfortunes suffered by Pennsylvania during the damp afternoon.

The most serious setback was an injury to Pinto, a fine-looking sophomore, who also showed he was a good running quarterback, gaining 34 yards on the ground. Pinto dislocated the index finger of his right hand, and Gary Shue, a left-handed signal-caller, replaced him for a period and a half. Pinto returned in the second half, his effectiveness diminished not by his finger but by a good rush.
